REFERRAL INFORMATION

CPRI provides trauma-informed and highly specialized services for children and youth of Ontario who experience complex and long-standing combinations of mental health difficulties with or without developmental challenges.

CPRI provides services that are based on a partnership model with community service providers in order to develop and promote a consistent and effective plan to assist children/youth in achieving their goals in their home communities.

Before a referral to CPRI is considered, generally, local services available to support a child in their home community are accessed. This may include a local paediatrician, community psychiatry, or a child & youth mental health/developmental agency and/or worker.

Referral packages for agency to agency community consultation, outpatient programs, or inpatient treatment are all online at www.cpri.ca.

A package must include Part A, B and C to be considered complete. Send your completed intake package by:

Email: CPRI.Intake@ontario.ca

OUR APPROACH

CPRI clinical services are based on the child/youth's individualized strengths and needs. The services may include consultation, assessment, collaborative treatment planning, and/or the provision of initial stages of treatment.

CPRI provides capacity building to organizations and in communities to support service providers through the delivery of education and learning services, data and applied research, and clinical services.

APPLIED RESEARCH & EDUCATION

Our goal is to collect and share quality information to support evidence based decision-making, evaluation, and improved clinical practice in child and youth mental and developmental health. We also provide learning opportunities for student placements, and engage in partnerships that enable us to collaborate on research initiatives within Canada and internationally that contribute new knowledge to the field.

VOLUNTEER ORGANIZATION OF CPRI

VOCPRI (www.vocpri.ca) is a not-for-profit registered charity (Lic. # 89249 7249 RR0001) that strives to support the individual needs of the children and families as well as programs of CPRI by contributing funds for equipment, special projects, education and research and by fostering new funding resources, community partnerships and positive relationships with our donors and CPRI volunteers.
